

The Oaks at Boca Raton Turns Back Prices for Buyers Building New Homes

The Oaks at Boca Raton, the last great estate home community in Boca Raton, is turning back prices and offering a limited opportunity to buyers looking for the right address at a remarkable value. From only $699,000, buyers can build a new home within the 282-acre, resort-style community. This exciting promotion offers potential buyers the choice of several collections with a wide selection of spacious floor plans, and includes all the same luxurious features that were priced higher in the past.

“Savvy buyers are taking advantage of this rare opportunity to build a new estate home inside The Oaks at Boca Raton,” said Lorna Swartz, Director of Sales for Boca’s most sought-after estate home community. “Buyers can now have a desirable Boca Raton address and take advantage of all the amenities The Oaks has to offer at yesteryear’s pricing.”

The Oaks’ equity-free club lifestyle centers on The Club at The Oaks, with its handsome Santa Barbara-style clubhouse and exciting program of social events. Residents enjoy a full-service Spa and Fitness Center and a resort-size, tropically landscaped heated pool surrounded by chic cabanas and a casual poolside café and full-size basketball court. The popular Tennis Center at The Club offers 12 courts, including a stadium court, a red-clay court and a hard court, plus a well-equipped pro shop and a full schedule of tennis events coordinated by professional staff.

The Oaks at Boca Raton is the imaginative creation of two of South Florida’s premier builder/developer firms: Kenco Communities, headed by Kenneth Endelson and Richard Finkelstein, and Albanese-Popkin Development Group, headed by Leonard Albanese and Edward Popkin. They are joined in this superb community by the outstanding building firm of Charlse-Watt Communities, headed by Steven Charlse.

Buyers are encouraged to act fast and take advantage of this special occasion that won’t last long.
